PERFORMANCE RIGHTS & ROYALTY PAYMENTS: All amateur and stock performance rights to this play are controlled exclusively by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. No amateur or stock production groups or individuals may perform this play without securing license and royalty arrangements in advance from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. Questions concerning other rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. If necessary, we will contact the author or the author’s agent. PLEASE NOTE that royalty fees for performing this play can be located online at Brooklyn Publishers, LLC website (http://www.brookpub.com). Royalty fees are subject to change without notice. Professional and stock fees will be set upon application in accordance with your producing circumstances. Any licensing requests and inquiries relating to amateur and stock (professional) performance rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. You will find our contact information on the following page.

Royalty of the required amount must be paid, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged. Only forensics competitions are exempt from this fee.

AUTHOR CREDIT: All groups or individuals receiving permission to produce this play must give the author(s) credit in any and all advertisement and publicity relating to the production of this play. The author’s billing must appear directly below the title on a separate line where no other written matter appears. The name of the author(s) must be at least 50% as large as the title of the play. No person or entity may receive larger or more prominent credit than that which is given to the author(s).

PUBLISHER CREDIT: Whenever this play is produced, all programs, advertisements, flyers or other printed material must include the following notice:

Produced by special arrangement with Brooklyn Publishers, LLC (http://www.brookpub.com)

TRADE MARKS, PUBLIC FIGURES, & MUSICAL WORKS: This play may include references to brand names or public figures. All references are intended only as parody or other legal means of expression. This play may contain suggestions for the performance of a musical work (either in part or in whole). Brooklyn Publishers, LLC have not obtained performing rights of these works. The direction of such works is only a playwright’s suggestion, and the producer should obtain such permissions on their own. The website for the U.S. copyright office is http://www.copyright.gov.

COPYING: from the book in any form (in whole or excerpt), whether photocopying, scanning recording, videotaping, storing in a retrieval system, or by any other means is strictly forbidden without consent of Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

TO PERFORM THIS PLAY

1. Royalty fees must be paid to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC before permission is granted to use and perform the playwright’s work.

2. Royalty of the required amount must be paid each time the play is performed, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged.

3. When performing one-acts or full-length plays, enough playbooks must be purchased for cast and crew.

4. Copying or duplication of any part of this script is strictly forbidden.

5. Any changes to the script are not allowed without direct authorization by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

6. Credit to the author and publisher is required on all promotional items associated with this play’s performance(s).

7. Do not break copyright laws with any of our plays. This is a very serious matter and the consequences can be quite expensive. We must protect our playwrights, who earn their living through the legal payment of script and performance royalties.

8. If you have questions concerning performance rules, contact us by the various ways listed below:

Copying, rather than purchasing cast copies, and/or failure to pay royalties is a federal offense. Cheating us and our wonderful playwrights in this manner will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Please support theatre and follow federal copyright laws.
I’m really tired of this room. Can I just say that? I mean, it’s a nice view and all, but it’s getting really old. Man, I wish I could just go outside, you know? I’ve been in this room for four months now. Four months! I haven’t been outside once! I haven’t even been able to open the window!

Yep, but that’s how it is with the “Big C”. Good old cancer. All my friends have to wear masks when they come to visit so I don’t get any of their germs. Like cooties or something. I remember that game.

(HE/SHE jumps up from the chair and pretends to be a child in the schoolyard)

I’m gonna touch you! I’m gonna touch you! Ha! I got you! You’ve got my cooties, you’ve got my cooties. Now you’re gonna die!

(HE/SHE returns back to the present)

I hope cooties aren’t as lethal as Hodgkin’s’ disease. I touched a lot of kids back in kindergarten.

(pretending to be a parent on the phone with another parent)

Mrs. Johnson, I just wanted to let you know that my child has...I’m terribly embarrassed to say this, but...cooties. My child has cooties. Be sure to keep your child away. We’re going to the best doctors, of course, but we’re not sure how long it will take for the “de-cootying” process.

(back to normal)

You probably have to wear a mask with all your patients, don’t you? That must get tiring. Always breathing in your own air. I think I’d faint after a while. DO you always have to wear gloves, too? Most of the time. Does that white flaky stuff from inside the gloves get all over your hands? That’s gotta be a pain.

What’s your name again? I’m sorry. The medications (refers to the I.V.) make me a bit forgetful.

(listens)

Gabrielle? That’s a beautiful name. Is that like Gabriel, from the Bible? The angel? Yes. That makes sense. All the nurses here sure seem like angels to me. Except maybe for that night nurse, Shelia. She does not know how to take blood, can I tell you that? It took her about four times to find a vein. I’m thinking about coloring them in with magic markers so she can find them tonight.

(as if speaking to SHELIA)

Blue is for my veins, Shelia! Right here. Do you see the things that look like little streams under my skin? The things that are popping out ’cause you tied the rubber thing around my arm? Those are veins! Congratulations! Have you been to medical school?

(back to normal)

I’m sorry, I don’t mean to be mean. I’m just tired of being poked and prodded and stuck with needles.

(pause)

I guess you couldn’t tell me for sure if I’m going to die or not, could you, Gabrielle? You don’t have to answer that, I know you don’t know. It’s just that...everyday I lay here and listen to a doctor tell me about how I’m doing. One day the prognosis is positive, the next it’s not so good. And every little piece of information is something I can cling to, a bit of control that I think I have. It's almost like the doctors are gods or something. If they say something, it must be true. Except, of course, for that med student the other day.

(i impersonates a wild-eyed, over zealous med student)

Hi, Cancer, right? Okay. We gotta get your white blood cell count up, so I'm gonna give you some more zenatropin and amoxalphilacin and riboglobin. These are all brand new drugs which have had great success, so they should be fine for you. We'll have you out of here within a week or two, you should be back to normal with monthly chemotherapy until remission. Unless, of course, you've got Hodgkin's disease, and then we really don't want to mess with your blood cell count. What? Oh, you do have Hodgkin's disease? Wait a second, what's your name again?
