

COYOTE KILLER

Dramatic Monologue

by
Matt Buchanan

Brooklyn Publishers, LLC

Toll-Free 888-473-8521

Fax 319-368-8011

Web www.brookpub.com

CAUTION: Professionals & amateurs are hereby warned that Coyote Killer is subject to a royalty. This play is fully protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America, Canada, the British Commonwealth and all other countries of the Copyright Union.

RIGHTS RESERVED: All rights to this play are strictly reserved, including professional and amateur stage performance rights. Also reserved are: motion pictures, recitation, lecturing, public reading, radio broadcasting, television, video and the rights of translation into non-English languages.

PERFORMANCE RIGHTS & ROYALTY PAYMENTS: All amateur and stock performance rights to this play are controlled exclusively by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. No amateur or stock production groups or individuals may perform this play without securing license and royalty arrangements in advance from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. Questions concerning other rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. If necessary, we will contact the author or the author's agent. PLEASE NOTE that royalty fees for performing this play can be located online at Brooklyn Publishers, LLC website (<http://www.brookpub.com>). Royalty fees are subject to change without notice. Professional and stock fees will be set upon application in accordance with your producing circumstances. Any licensing requests and inquiries relating to amateur and stock (professional) performance rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. You will find our contact information on the following page.

Royalty of the required amount must be paid whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged. Only forensics competitions are exempt from this fee.

AUTHOR CREDIT: All groups or individuals receiving permission to produce this play must give the author(s) credit in any and all advertisement and publicity relating to the production of this play. The author's billing must appear directly below the title on a separate line where no other written matter appears. The name of the author(s) must be at least 50% as large as the title of the play. No person or entity may receive larger or more prominent credit than that which is given to the author(s).

PUBLISHER CREDIT: Whenever this play is produced, all programs, advertisements, flyers or other printed material must include the following notice:

Produced by special arrangement with Brooklyn Publishers, LLC

<http://www.brookpub.com>

TRADE MARKS, PUBLIC FIGURES, & MUSICAL WORKS: This play may include references to brand names or public figures. All references are intended only as parody or other legal means of expression. This play may contain suggestions for the performance of a musical work (either in part or in whole). Brooklyn Publishers, LLC have not obtained performing rights of these works. The direction of such works is only a playwright's suggestion, and the play producers should obtain such permissions on their own. The website for the U.S. copyright office is <http://www.copyright.gov>.

COPYING: from the book in any form (in whole or excerpt), whether photocopying, scanning recording, videotaping, storing in a retrieval system, or by any other means, is strictly forbidden without consent of Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

TO PERFORM THIS PLAY

1. Royalty fees must be paid to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC before permission is granted to use and perform the playwright's work.
2. Royalty of the required amount must be paid each time the play is performed whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged.
3. When performing plays of any length, enough playbooks must be purchased for cast and crew.
4. Copying or duplication of any part of this script is strictly forbidden.
5. Any changes to the script are not allowed without direct authorization by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.
6. Credit to the author and publisher is required on all promotional items associated with this play's performance(s).
7. Do not break copyright laws with any of our plays. This is a very serious matter and the consequences can be quite expensive. We must protect our playwrights who earn their living through the legal payment of script and performance royalties.
8. If you have questions concerning performance rules, contact us by the various ways listed below:

Toll-free: 888-473-8521

Fax: 319-368-8011

Email: customerservice@brookpub.com

Copying, rather than purchasing cast copies, and/or failure to pay royalties is a federal offense. Cheating us and our wonderful playwrights in this manner will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Please support theatre and follow federal copyright laws.

COYOTE KILLER

by
Matt Buchanan

CAST: One Male or Female. Young teen, sensitive, determined, smart.

You'd never know it to look at me, but I'm a stone killer. Stone cold. I'm not proud of it. The things you learn about yourself.

I got Archie when I was two and he was my best friend. Sometimes, like when Dad went away, and when my stepfather first moved in, it seemed like he was my only friend. He used to sleep in my bed every night—except I think after I was asleep he left to go hunting, but he always came back before I woke up. Not that he ever caught anything but dust bunnies, because when he was a kitten he tore up a ratty old chair that used to belong to my great-grandmother and my Mom had his claws ripped out by the vet. But then again she also had his balls cut off and he never seemed to miss them either.

Archie loved me as much as I loved him. He didn't love everybody—just me. He hated my stepfather. When my stepfather would come into the living room, Archie would get up and leave. I don't think he was afraid of him—he just got up, real stiff, with his tail in the air, and marched out of the room. Every time. He liked my Mom okay because she fed him, but he really was afraid of my little brother Charlie.

Until last fall, Archie stayed indoors most of the time. He sometimes came outside to play with me when I was little, but we live near some woods and my Mom thought it would be dangerous for him to be out at night. But then Charlie started getting sick all the time and it turned out he had allergies. Suddenly my Mom didn't care how dangerous it was outside. The day she told me I threw my first real tantrum in like ten years.

"You're the one who always said it wasn't safe out there!"

"The neighbors have a cat and it's fine."

"But she has claws!" Then my stepfather has to get his input in.

"I can't believe you're being so selfish! Is your pet more important than your own brother?"

"I've had Archie a lot longer than I've had Charlie, and he's a lot nicer! Why don't you make Charlie sleep outside?" Well, I said a lot of stupid stuff and I ended up grounded with no cell phone for about a month and Archie ended up outside. At least out there Charlie couldn't catch him. Maybe his allergies wouldn't have been so bad if he hadn't tortured Archie so much.

Actually, Archie seemed to like living outside. Even without claws he used to go hunting in the tall grass and chase squirrels all over the yard. At first I made a point of going outside all the time to sit with him and pet him, but as winter came and it got cold I started doing it less and less. I'm really sorry about that now. By spring I'd gotten so used to the arrangement that when our neighbor reported seeing a coyote in his yard I thought, "Cool!" I mean, it's not like we live in the Arizona desert or something. There's a huge city like fifteen minutes from our house. I found myself hoping the coyote would come around and I would see it. I even told some kids at school I had seen it. It never even occurred to me to worry about Archie until I found him that morning.

Half of him anyway. At first I thought he was just sleeping. His head and front legs looked normal. But when I went up to him that was all there was. His front half was lying there in the grass and the rest of him was just gone. Something had just bitten him in half. There was hardly any blood on the part that was left, but somehow that made it even worse. I ran away and threw up for a long time. That night I went out to the shed and got a shovel and buried what was left of my best friend underneath his favorite squirrel tree. But I didn't cry. Not once.

The next night, after everyone was in bed, I took a flashlight and went for a walk in the woods. I was looking for the coyote but I have no idea what I thought I was going to do if I found it. I wasn't really thinking—I was just angry. Angry like I could never remember feeling. Angry until there was no room for anything else. I really think if I had run into the coyote that night I would have tried to kill it with my bare hands.

Of course there was no chance of that. Between the flashlight and all the noise I was making crashing through the woods, the stupidest coyote in the world could have kept away from me. After about an hour I gave up even trying to be quiet and screamed as loud as I could, "Come on, you bastard! Come pick on someone your own size!" I'm surprised the neighbors didn't call the cops.

The next night I left the flashlight home, but I brought an aluminum baseball bat and I brought some hamburger I stole from the fridge. I found a tree with a nice sort of chair in its roots. I put the hamburger on the ground and settled down to wait.

I woke up at about five in the morning, stiff and cold, even though it was July. The hamburger was gone. I took my bat and went back inside before anyone else got up. Even though I had slept most of the night I went back to bed and slept 'til noon.

I did the same thing the next night, except I brought a blanket and I took some tuna instead of hamburger. I was determined to stay awake but there's something about sitting in the dark. I just kept sneaking out every night. If my Mom ever wondered why there were leaves and pine needles in my bed she never said anything. I don't know what she thought happened to all the food. I'd been at it maybe two-and-a-half weeks when it happened. I'd fallen asleep with my bat in my arms as usual, but then suddenly I wasn't asleep. Very slowly I opened my eyes and there it was, about to scarf down the last piece of my Mom's lasagna.

It was huge. Much bigger than I thought a coyote was supposed to be. I was afraid to move—afraid I'd scare it away. I just looked. And just for a second, as it was snatching the food and running away, I swear it caught my eye.

That night I put the food—it was a big hunk of American cheese—a little closer to me. I didn't hear it until it was right on top of me. I sat frozen, with my eyes glued to it. It looked me in the eye and I thought it was going to balk, but it darted in, never taking its eyes off mine, grabbed the cheese and ran away.

The next night I put the food even closer, and closer the next night, until I actually set it on my lap. This was maybe two weeks after I first saw it. I never fell asleep again, and the coyote seemed to get more confident each night.

END OF FREE PREVIEW