

I HATE PIGEONS!

A Ten-Minute Comedy Monologue

by
Anne Hughes

BROOKLYN PUBLISHERS, LLC

Publishers of Contest-Winning Drama

Copyright © 2000 by Anne Hughes
All rights reserved

CAUTION: Professionals & amateurs are hereby warned that I Hate Pigeons! is subject to a royalty. This play is fully protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America, Canada, the British Commonwealth and all other countries of the Copyright Union.

RIGHTS RESERVED: All rights to this play are strictly reserved, including professional and amateur stage performance rights. Also reserved are: motion pictures, recitation, lecturing, public reading, radio broadcasting, television, video and the rights of translation into non-English languages.

PERFORMANCE RIGHTS & ROYALTY PAYMENTS: All amateur and stock performance rights to this play are controlled exclusively by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. No amateur or stock production groups or individuals may perform this play without securing license and royalty arrangements in advance from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. Questions concerning other rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. If necessary, we will contact the author or the author's agent. PLEASE NOTE that royalty fees for performing this play can be located online at Brooklyn Publishers, LLC website (<http://www.brookpub.com>). Royalty fees are subject to change without notice. Professional and stock fees will be set upon application in accordance with your producing circumstances. Any licensing requests and inquiries relating to amateur and stock (professional) performance rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. You will find our contact information on the following page.

Royalty of the required amount must be paid, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged. Only forensics competitions are exempt from this fee.

AUTHOR CREDIT: All groups or individuals receiving permission to produce this play must give the author(s) credit in any and all advertisement and publicity relating to the production of this play. The author's billing must appear directly below the title on a separate line where no other written matter appears. The name of the author(s) must be at least 50% as large as the title of the play. No person or entity may receive larger or more prominent credit than that which is given to the author(s).

PUBLISHER CREDIT: Whenever this play is produced, all programs, advertisements, flyers or other printed material must include the following notice:

Produced by special arrangement with Brooklyn Publishers, LLC

(<http://www.brookpub.com>)

TRADE MARKS, PUBLIC FIGURES, & MUSICAL WORKS: This play may include references to brand names or public figures. All references are intended only as parody or other legal means of expression. This play may contain suggestions for the performance of a musical work (either in part or in whole). Brooklyn Publishers, LLC have not obtained performing rights of these works. The direction of such works is only a playwright's suggestion, and the play producer should obtain such permissions on their own. The website for the U.S. copyright office is <http://www.copyright.gov>.

COPYING: from the book in any form (in whole or excerpt), whether photocopying, scanning recording, videotaping, storing in a retrieval system, or by any other means is strictly forbidden without consent of Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

TO PERFORM THIS PLAY

1. Royalty fees must be paid to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC before permission is granted to use and perform the playwright's work.
2. Royalty of the required amount must be paid each time the play is performed, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged.
3. When performing one-acts or full-length plays, enough playbooks must be purchased for cast and crew.
4. Copying or duplication of any part of this script is strictly forbidden.
5. Any changes to the script are not allowed without direct authorization by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.
6. Credit to the author and publisher is required on all promotional items associated with this play's performance(s).
7. Do not break copyright laws with any of our plays. This is a very serious matter and the consequences can be quite expensive. We must protect our playwrights, who earn their living through the legal payment of script and performance royalties.

8. If you have questions concerning performance rules, contact us by the various ways listed below:

Toll-free: 888-473-8521

Fax: 319-368-8011

Email: customerservice@brookpub.com

Copying, rather than purchasing cast copies, and/or failure to pay royalties is a federal offense. Cheating us and our wonderful playwrights in this manner will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Please support theatre and follow federal copyright laws.

I HATE PIGEONS!

by
Anne Hughes

(The actor might appear very drooping and depressed, arms stiffly out to the side and from time to time making to and fro movements with his neck.)

I wasn't always like this – shabby, unkempt, cadging for food in the streets. I was well thought of. I was a stockbroker, an up-and-coming young man, and an internet wiz with a great future ahead of me. As soon as I got out of college in the Middle West I came to New York and right away I got a good job with a multinational financial company specializing in internet stocks – IPOs. After only a few months I was on the way to a nice, profitable career.

(Trying to brush away an invisible rival.) Here, don't take that! It's mine, I saw it first! Some nerve!

I even got myself a nice small apartment in Tribeca. It was well laid out and convenient to my work. Expensive, of course, by Middle Western standards, but I could swing it. It had views over the Hudson River. I was so lucky. I couldn't believe my luck – only a couple of months in New York and I had a nice job and a nice apartment. But there was one trouble with the apartment: it had a parapet. A parapet, outside my bedroom window. A flat ledge maybe twelve inches wide. Pigeons would roost on the parapet. Whenever I was home I used to hear them all the time – making their cooing noises, raising their squabs, flapping their wings and depositing "souvenirs" all over. At first I thought they were cute and even company for me. I even fed them, God forgive me! But then more and more would come. Everybody told me they could carry diseases; they were dirty. I began to think of them as flying rats. I tried everything to get them to move away. I'd yell at them. I made noises. I'd spray water on them. I even set up some plastic strips that looked like spikes. Whenever I would threaten them they would rise up in a cloud, circle and come right back again. Nothing worked! They would come every day and every day there were more and more of them and more and more white splotches on the parapet. I was at my wit's end. I even began thinking of moving.

(Angrily to a second invisible rival.) Hey, you! Don't try to shove me aside just because you're bigger than I am. I may be small but I have as much right to be here as you! Have you no shame? You big bully!

The pigeons began to get on my nerves. I'd see them night and day. They began to haunt my dreams. My work was affected because even in my office I could see them roosting and partying on my parapet and laughing to themselves that I wasn't there to chase them away. My work suffered. I got a first warning from my boss for inattention to my work. He said sarcastically, "We would be really grateful if you could check in with us now and then and find out what we are doing." But how could I concentrate? I was always scheming to outwit those pigeons. It became an obsession. Moving was out of the question. I had been lucky to find the apartment in the first place and I simply could not find another that was so convenient and cheap. I looked at quite a few. Maybe I could cut off the parapet?

I went to the landlord. "Whatsammata, you crazie?" he said. "I'm not making any money on this building as it is. And you come along and want to make it smaller? You're outta your mind, Charlie." Incidentally, my name's not Charlie.

I was looking over books on masonry and checking the yellow pages for a stonemason when into my neighborhood moved an animal lover – a woman who actually fed the idiotic little things every day. Every morning she would get out there at the edge of the little local park with seed and breadcrumbs and start throwing. I'd pass her every day as I was going to work. Hundreds, thousands, millions of them surrounded her – wings flapping, beaks poking the ground. They filled the square; they filled the sky with their wings, flapping, feathers, feathers everywhere, making deafening noises! Deafening! I pleaded with her to stop and so did some of my neighbors – but no, Ms. Do Good would just glare at me, "If I want to feed pigeons, I'll jolly well feed pigeons, and you can't stop me. I know my rights." I went to a policeman, but he looked at me as if I were nuts. "Get outta here! You think I ain't got enough to do chasing bad guys and you want me to stop some dame from feeding pigeons. Get real!" I pictured them flying in from Texas and the West Coast to take advantage of all this free food.

END OF FREE PREVIEW