

BREAKDOWN IN WAKEFIELD

A Ten-Minute Dramatic Duet

by
Pat Gabridge

Brooklyn Publishers, LLC

Toll-Free 888-473-8521

Fax 319-368-8011

Web www.brookpub.com

Copyright © 1999 by Pat Gabridge
All rights reserved

CAUTION: Professionals & amateurs are hereby warned that Breakdown In Wakefield is subject to a royalty. This play is fully protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America, Canada, the British Commonwealth and all other countries of the Copyright Union.

RIGHTS RESERVED: All rights to this play are strictly reserved, including professional and amateur stage performance rights. Also reserved are: motion pictures, recitation, lecturing, public reading, radio broadcasting, television, video and the rights of translation into non-English languages.

PERFORMANCE RIGHTS & ROYALTY PAYMENTS: All amateur and stock performance rights to this play are controlled exclusively by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. No amateur or stock production groups or individuals may perform this play without securing license and royalty arrangements in advance from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. Questions concerning other rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. If necessary, we will contact the author or the author's agent. PLEASE NOTE that royalty fees for performing this play can be located online at Brooklyn Publishers, LLC website (<http://www.brookpub.com>). Royalty fees are subject to change without notice. Professional and stock fees will be set upon application in accordance with your producing circumstances. Any licensing requests and inquiries relating to amateur and stock (professional) performance rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. You will find our contact information on the following page.

Royalty of the required amount must be paid, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged. Only forensics competitions are exempt from this fee.

AUTHOR CREDIT: All groups or individuals receiving permission to produce this play must give the author(s) credit in any and all advertisement and publicity relating to the production of this play. The author's billing must appear directly below the title on a separate line where no other written matter appears. The name of the author(s) must be at least 50% as large as the title of the play. No person or entity may receive larger or more prominent credit than that which is given to the author(s).

PUBLISHER CREDIT: Whenever this play is produced, all programs, advertisements, flyers or other printed material must include the following notice:

Produced by special arrangement with Brooklyn Publishers, LLC

<http://www.brookpub.com>

TRADE MARKS, PUBLIC FIGURES, & MUSICAL WORKS: This play may include references to brand names or public figures. All references are intended only as parody or other legal means of expression. This play may contain suggestions for the performance of a musical work (either in part or in whole). Brooklyn Publishers, LLC have not obtained performing rights of these works. The direction of such works is only a playwright's suggestion, and the play producer should obtain such permissions on their own. The website for the U.S. copyright office is <http://www.copyright.gov>.

COPYING from the book in any form (in whole or excerpt), whether photocopying, scanning recording, videotaping, storing in a retrieval system, or by any other means, is strictly forbidden without consent of Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

TO PERFORM THIS PLAY

1. Royalty fees must be paid to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC before permission is granted to use and perform the playwright's work.
2. Royalty of the required amount must be paid each time the play is performed, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged.
3. When performing one-acts or full-length plays, enough playbooks must be purchased for cast and crew.
4. Copying or duplication of any part of this script is strictly forbidden.
5. Any changes to the script are not allowed without direct authorization by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.
6. Credit to the author and publisher is required on all promotional items associated with this play's performance(s).
7. Do not break copyright laws with any of our plays. This is a very serious matter and the consequences can be quite expensive. We must protect our playwrights, who earn their living through the legal payment of script and performance royalties.
8. If you have questions concerning performance rules, contact us by the various ways listed below:

Toll-free: 888-473-8521

Fax: 319-368-8011

Email: customerservice@brookpub.com

Copying, rather than purchasing cast copies, and/or failure to pay royalties is a federal offense. Cheating us and our wonderful playwrights in this manner will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Please support theatre and follow federal copyright laws.

BREAKDOWN IN WAKEFIELD

by
Pat Gabridge

Though this duet is intended for school contests, the characters should be played as older. JOE is in his late teens, but TRIXIE would be in her middle to late twenties.

CAST: JOE and TRIXIE

AT RISE: JOE is bent over studiously, as if HE'S looking under the hood of a car.

JOE: Stupid car. What's the matter with you? What am I going to do?

TRIXIE: (TRIXIE enters. SHE is several years older than JOE) Are you all right?

JOE: What?

TRIXIE: Are you all right?

JOE: Um, yeah, I'm fine.

TRIXIE: Little car trouble?

JOE: Yeah. Know if there's a mechanic on duty?

TRIXIE: Nine o'clock Sunday night? Even the grocery store is closed. They just pushed me out.

JOE: Great.

TRIXIE: What's the matter with it?

JOE: I have no idea. All I know about cars is that you put in gas, turn the key, and press the pedals. Then, mostly when you can't afford it, the stupid thing breaks down and you take it to some guy who barely finished high school, but who now becomes your weekly companion. He knows the patient is finished, but doesn't have the heart to tell you. You keep bringing it in until you've sunk enough money to buy a whole new car.

TRIXIE: Rough day, huh?

JOE: Yeah. An unbelievably stupid, wretched, stinking day. (pause) Sorry.

TRIXIE: Don't be.

JOE: Know anything about cars?

TRIXIE: Not much. Everything seems where it ought to be. You a long way from home?

JOE: Four hundred miles. Peoria.

TRIXIE: Wow. Where you headin'?

JOE: Pittsburgh.

TRIXIE: Quite a ways.

JOE: Another two hundred.

TRIXIE: Guess you're not gonna get there tonight, huh?

JOE: Not likely.

TRIXIE: (extending her hand) I'm Trixie.

JOE: Joe.

TRIXIE: So what's next, Joe?

JOE: I don't know. Haven't eaten since yesterday. Guess I'll walk around and try to find someplace open.

TRIXIE: You won't have any luck. Bob's is the last place to close, and they close at six.

JOE: (peering in the window) You don't suppose Bob stuck around to clean up, do you?

TRIXIE: Horace.

JOE: What?

TRIXIE: His name is Horace. Horace Ollup. Bob just looks better on a sign. He figured no one would come to a place called Horace's Grill. Doesn't have that certain something.

JOE: You don't suppose Horace would be around?

TRIXIE: Doubtful.

JOE: (shouting) Hey! Hey, Horace, open up!

TRIXIE: He's already home watchin' dirty movies. Has himself one of those satellite dishes.

JOE: How do you know what he's doing?

TRIXIE: Well, he used to rent the real steamy ones from the video store where I work. He came in every Sunday night at six-thirty. We use the system where you bring us the tape jacket, with the title and picture on it, so people can see what you're getting. It always made him real nervous. He'd lay 'em face down so you couldn't see the title, and he'd always wait until everybody left or was making their selections. Then he'd scurry over and slide it to me real nice and quiet. He'd never look me in the eye 'til after I gave him the tape and put away the cover. Then he'd look at me, as polite as could be, and say, "Thank you, Trixie." When I'd drive by on my way home, his curtains would be shut tighter than staves on a barrel. Ever since he got his satellite dish, he doesn't come by anymore, but he still keeps his curtains shut tight, right at six-thirty.

JOE: Sounds like you've got him figured out.

TRIXIE: I know my way around here. Maybe too well. You got family in Pittsburgh?

JOE: Yeah. Family gathering.

TRIXIE: That's nice.

JOE: A funeral.

TRIXIE: I'm sorry to hear that. Was it a close relation?

JOE: My brother.

TRIXIE: Oh. I'm sorry I brought it up.

JOE: That's all right.

TRIXIE: Can't stop thinking about him, huh?

JOE: Yeah, kinda like that.

TRIXIE: How did he die?

JOE: Car accident. Head on collision. Everybody died. I heard it was a real mess.

TRIXIE: That's terrible.

JOE: Happened three days ago. I would have been on my way sooner, you see, but I just got this new job. I couldn't get the time off. Couldn't even ask 'em. It wouldn't have been right. I called and told my parents I'd be back for the funeral. I would have been back already, but I just couldn't. You see what I mean?

TRIXIE: It's not your fault.

JOE: That's what I keep trying to tell them. They treat me like I'm some sort of cold-hearted degenerate. Mom crying over the phone, Dad saying they can really use me. I'm doing the best I can, you know.

TRIXIE: Sure you are.

JOE: He goes in the ground tomorrow morning, ten o'clock. They're all going to be saying, "Where's Joe? What's the matter with that boy?" But you can't hold up a funeral. I mean, it's all scheduled, it has to happen, with or without me. "Where's Joe? Where's Joe? What's the matter with him?"

TRIXIE: Your car broke down. They can't blame you for that.

JOE: They will.

TRIXIE: They're just upset. They'll get over it.

JOE: I'm supposed to be there. And now this stupid car... (HE kicks the car)

TRIXIE: I've got a car at home. I could give you a ride.

JOE: I couldn't ask that.

TRIXIE: You didn't. I volunteered.

JOE: It's too much out of your way. We're talkin' a four hour drive here.

TRIXIE: I know. We can get you there just after midnight.

JOE: I can't leave my car behind.

TRIXIE: No one's gonna take it. It doesn't work.

JOE: (pointing off stage) See that sign? "Customers Only. Violators will be Towed." I can't afford it.

TRIXIE: Horace is just trying to intimidate you.

JOE: Well, consider me intimidated.

TRIXIE: Look, when we get to my place, I'll call him up. He won't answer, since he'll be "occupied." But he's probably got an answering machine, being the respectable businessman. So I'll say, "Horace, you just keep your hands in your lap, honey, but a friend of mine needs to leave his car in your lot for a while. Okay?" He won't tow your car.

JOE: That'll just make him mad.

TRIXIE: No, no. See, if he tows your car, he knows I'll tell the Ladies Social Club, the one that eats lunch here every Tuesday afternoon. I'll inform them that their host's favorite movies are Naughty Nannies and Sorority Jugs Four. Now I don't think old Horace wants to lose a guaranteed fifteen lunches a week, do you?

JOE: It wouldn't be right for you to tell on him. Don't you have a professional and moral obligation to keep his privacy?

TRIXIE: I'm not a doctor. I rent videotapes. Video clerks don't have a special version of the Hippocratic Oath. If I want to tattle on him, I will.

JOE: It's a four hour drive, in the middle of the night. It's too big an imposition.

TRIXIE: Do I look like a child to you?

JOE: No.

TRIXIE: I know when it's nighttime. I know how long it takes to drive to Pittsburgh. If I add it all up in my head and still want to take you, who are you to say I can't offer?

JOE: No one.

TRIXIE: Come on then. Let's go.

JOE: (pacing) I can't.

END OF FREE PREVIEW