THE GIRL WHO LOVED THE MOON
By Ann Marie Oliva

Copyright © 2008 by Ann Marie Oliva, All rights reserved.
ISBN 1-60003-349-0

CAUTION: Professionals and amateurs are hereby warned that this Work is subject to a royalty. This Work is fully protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America and all countries with which the United States has reciprocal copyright relations, whether through bilateral or multilateral treaties or otherwise, and including, but not limited to, all countries covered by the Pan-American Copyright Convention, the Universal Copyright Convention and the Berne Convention.

RIGHTS RESERVED: All rights to this Work are strictly reserved, including professional and amateur stage performance rights. Also reserved are: motion picture, recitation, lecturing, public reading, radio broadcasting, television, video or sound recording, all forms of mechanical or electronic reproduction, such as CD-ROM, CD-I, DVD, information and storage retrieval systems and photocopying, and the rights of translation into non-English languages.

PERFORMANCE RIGHTS AND ROYALTY PAYMENTS: All amateur and stock performance rights to this Work are controlled exclusively by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. No amateur or stock production groups or individuals may perform this play without securing license and royalty arrangements in advance from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. Questions concerning other rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. Royalty fees are subject to change without notice. Professional and stock fees will be set upon application in accordance with your producing circumstances. Any licensing requests and inquiries relating to amateur and stock (professional) performance rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

Royalty of the required amount must be paid, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged.

AUTHOR CREDIT: All groups or individuals receiving permission to produce this play must give the author(s) credit in any and all advertisement and publicity relating to the production of this play. The author’s billing must appear directly below the title on a separate line where no other written matter appears. The name of the author(s) must be at least 50% as large as the title of the play. No person or entity may receive larger or more prominent credit than that which is given to the author(s).

PUBLISHER CREDIT: Whenever this play is produced, all programs, advertisements, flyers or other printed material must include the following notice:

Produced by special arrangement with Brooklyn Publishers, LLC

COPYING: Any unauthorized copying of this Work or excerpts from this Work is strictly forbidden by law. No part of this Work may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form, by any means now known or yet to be invented, including photocopying or scanning, without prior permission from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.
CHARACTERS

STARLA A young Aleut girl, 18, troubled and preoccupied. She has long dark hair, parted in the middle.

JERI STARLA’S college advisor.

TIME

The present.

SETTING

The advisor’s classroom, or office.

PROPS

Props include: a desk, two chairs, some folders and papers, a backpack, notebook and pen.
JERI sits at a desk working on some papers. STARLA enters quietly. JERI looks up to notice her.

JERI: I didn't hear you come in.
STARLA: I was trying to remember.
JERI: What time the appointment was?
STARLA: It's like it's on the tip of my tongue, but not really, because really it's on the tip of my mind, but every time I get close, it fades again.
JERI: Are you alright?
STARLA: This room is dark.
JERI: (looking around) It faces north.
STARLA: I like it dark.

(JERI sees that STARLA isn't going to sit. SHE comes around from her desk.)

JERI: I'm glad you're here.
STARLA: Really?
JERI: Yes. I've been trying to think of how I would . . . want some water or something?
STARLA: It doesn't last.
JERI: What doesn't?
STARLA: Not like at home.
JERI: Starla, I'm concerned about you.
STARLA: At home, the stars last, the snow lasts, and the moon, the moon lasts.
JERI: (sighing) You had a great start. You were adjusting to all your classes, earning A's and B's. I told you if there was anything, anything, you needed, just come to me.
STARLA: Here, nothing much lasts.
JERI: You scared Erin. She didn't know what to make of you after a while. That's why she requested another roommate.

(A beat)

She's worried about you. That's why she came to see me.
STARLA: I keep trying to remember.
JERI: Sit down, please.
STARLA: Why?

(JERI walks to the chair, and motions to STARLA to sit, which SHE does absently.)

JERI: I know it's not easy . . .

(STARLA goes into her back pack and takes out a notebook and starts to write in it feverishly, then stops.)

STARLA: It's gone. I had it, right here (motioning to her head) for just a moment, but now I can't remember.

JERI: (opening a file folder) You were doing alright until Parents Weekend. Do you remember what happened then? I know you didn't have anyone visit. You told me your aunt and uncle couldn't make the long trip.

STARLA: Parents Weekend?

JERI: You stopped going to class after that. I heard from all your professors. They were afraid you'd dropped out.

STARLA: (more animated, remembers something) There was a story.

JERI: What story?

STARLA: A myth, a fairy tale, a legend, an allegory, a fable, a parable, a folk tale, a . . .

JERI: Starla.

STARLA: The story. The story she told me over and over because I would beg her to.

JERI: She?

STARLA: The young woman.

JERI: When you were a child?

STARLA: At home.

JERI: Who was she?

STARLA: Dark hair.

(JERI waits for more of a reply.)

JERI: Do you remember anything else about her?

STARLA: Dark eyes.

JERI: Anything else?

STARLA: When the story was over, we would laugh together.

JERI: So, it was a funny story?

STARLA: I don't know.

JERI: (looks at the folder again) These scholarships are precious.
STARLA: Maybe she was funny? Maybe I was funny . . . yeah, yeah . . . I think I was funny. A funny, skinny, girl with stick legs and hair down her back, and teeth too big for her little face.

JERI: We only have a few of them available every year.

STARLA: It's like I'm looking at a movie and I see myself as a little girl, and the young woman, and we're laughing.

JERI: You were our first choice.

STARLA: I'm looking down and I see the pages of a book, opened . . .

JERI: You have so much promise. We don't want to lose you.

STARLA: She's pointing to something on the page.

JERI: What is it?

STARLA: The page is dark, but there are white spots . . . stars! That's it!

   Every time we get to that page she points to the stars and says that's how I got my name.

JERI: That's when you would laugh?

STARLA: No, the book wasn't finished.

JERI: And?

STARLA: (puts her hand to her head) Something about, the stars and the moon, I think, something about the moon.

JERI: A child's book about the stars and the moon?

JERI: Your book.

---

Thank you for reading this free excerpt from THE GIRL WHO LOVED THE MOON by Ann Marie Oliva. For performance rights and/or a complete copy of the script, please contact us at:

Brooklyn Publishers, LLC
P.O. Box 248 • Cedar Rapids, Iowa 52406
Toll Free: 1-888-473-8521 • Fax (319) 368-8011
www.brookpub.com