

THREE LITTLE WORDS

By Krista Boehnert

Copyright © 2016 by Krista Boehnert, All rights reserved.

ISBN: 978-1-60003-857-0

Caution: Professionals and amateurs are hereby warned that this Work is subject to a royalty. This Work is fully protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America and all countries with which the United States has reciprocal copyright relations, whether through bilateral or multilateral treaties or otherwise, and including, but not limited to, all countries covered by the Pan-American Copyright Convention, the Universal Copyright Convention and the Berne Convention.

Reservation of Rights: All rights to this Work are strictly reserved, including professional and amateur stage performance rights. Also reserved are: motion picture, recitation, lecturing, public reading, radio broadcasting, television, video or sound recording, all forms of mechanical or electronic reproduction, information and storage retrieval systems and photocopying, and the rights of translation.

Modifications: There shall be no deletions, alterations, or changes of any kind made to this Work or title of this Work, unless directly authorized by the publisher or otherwise allowed in the Work's "Production Notes." This includes changing of character gender, cutting or adding of dialogue, or alteration of language.

Royalties: All amateur and stock performance rights to this Work are controlled exclusively by Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. No amateur or stock production groups or individuals may perform this play without securing license and royalty arrangements in advance from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC. Royalty fees are subject to change without notice and will be set based upon your application in accordance with your producing circumstances. Royalty of the required amount must be paid, whether the play is presented for charity or profit and whether or not admission is charged. Any licensing requests and questions concerning rights should be addressed to Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

Credits: All groups or individuals receiving permission to produce this play must give the author(s) credit in any and all advertisement and publicity relating to the production of this play. The author's billing must appear directly below the title on a separate line where no other written matter appears. The name of the author(s) must be at least 50% as large as the title of the play. No person or entity may receive larger or more prominent credit than that which is given to the author(s). Whenever this play is produced, all programs, advertisements, flyers or other printed material must include the following notice: Produced by special arrangement with Brooklyn Publishers, LLC.

Reproduction: Any unauthorized copying of this Work or excerpts from this Work is strictly forbidden by law. No part of this Work may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form, by any means now known or yet to be invented, including photocopying or scanning, without prior permission from Brooklyn Publishers, LLC..

PUBLISHED BY BROOKLYN PUBLISHERS

1-888-473-8521

THREE LITTLE WORDS

A Ten Minute Dramatic Monologue

By Krista Boehnert

SYNOPSIS: Carrie Klein receives a phone call from the guy in her life saying he needs to tell her something and asks to meet her. Carrie prepares to hear the big news that awaits her by getting dressed up and trying to keep calm. The three little words are spoken. Rather than “I love you” from the lips of her boyfriend as she’s led the audience to believe, the words “You have cancer” are spoken by her doctor. Carrie has prepared herself to hear, “You’re perfectly healthy.” When the opposite proves true, she’s forced to grapple with the news of her own mortality.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

(1 female)

CARRIE KLEIN (f)..... 18 years old, is talking about the phrase that changed her life.

CARRIE: I've been with him for a while now. At first we were just casual, only getting together every now and then, but...for the past few months we've been seeing each other pretty steady. A lot. In fact, at this point in our relationship, we're together at least a couple times a week. Sometimes more, depending. We didn't have plans to get together last Friday, but he called and asked me if we could meet. Told me he had something to tell me. Something big. Something important.

I remember thinking. Wow, this must be it. He's going to say it. He's going to tell me those three little words. I was relieved that the day had finally come. All the time, all the months we've spent together, it means something to him. He'd finally figured out what. And now, he was ready to share it with me. To share those three little words.

When I recovered from the shock, I said I could meet up with him right after school and he said: "Good. I'll see you then." He sounded relieved that I'd show. Of course I was going to show. I'd been waiting for this day since the moment I met him. I wasn't going to mess around now. I was desperate to hear what he had to say.

As soon as I got home from school, I headed straight up to my room to get ready. I didn't have much time before we were supposed to meet up. I looked at myself in the mirror, and gasped. My outfit wasn't right for this occasion at all! I was getting epic news in a matter of minutes, and I definitely needed to be wearing different clothes. My t-shirt and torn jeans would be fine if we were seeing each other under normal circumstances, but we weren't. Today was going to be different than all the other times we'd spent together. Today was going to be life-changing. He was going to tell me three little words and set my world spinning. I needed to be better prepared. I needed a wardrobe upgrade. Stat.

I realize how lame this must sound to you. And girly, but...well, you're probably right. All I can tell you is that when I saw him, I wanted to be wearing an outfit that made me feel brave and beautiful. Ever since he'd called me, there'd been an entire battalion of butterflies whirling around in my stomach. Anything that would help me calm my nerves – even if it was silly, like changing my outfit – I was going to take it.

So...seven discarded outfits later, I ended up wearing a lavender dress with pretty pink flowers on it, and ruffles at the sleeves. The butterflies in my stomach totally approved because they calmed down a little. I swiped on some mascara and a bit of lipstick, and ta da! I was bold and beautiful and ready to go hear his news.

Well...that, and I had wasted a lot of time picking out an outfit. There was no time for the hot rollers now. My trusty ponytail was going to have to suffice; I had to get going or I'd be late to meet up with him. It was probably for the best, anyway. He's used to seeing me in my jeans and tees, the dress would be enough of a shake up for him. Had I tossed in movie star hair on top of it, it would've been a complete shock to his system. He probably wouldn't have recognized me, let alone tell me what he wanted to say.

Did I mention I was nervous?!?! Turns out he was too. When I first arrived and we greeted each other it was super awkward. After all the time we've spent together over the past few months, it's shocking that we could be awkward with each other, but we were.

Here's the thing: this is the person I've spilled all my secrets to. I've told him all my biggest fears, my deepest hopes, and he's listened patiently and never judged. He's always been there with comfort and a listening ear. That sounds like nothing really, but when you get right down to it, it counts. It counts for a whole lot. That's why I was so anxious. This guy knows all of me, and he's about to tell me those three little words. This moment is huge for me. How on earth am I supposed to be calm right now?

So, anyway, there we are stumbling our way through a greeting, neither of us able to act normal. It's like we both know things are about to be very different between us. Instead of being our natural selves, we're acting shy, and a bit standoffish with each other. He was as bad as me— which made me feel better. At least neither of us was at ease with this situation.

I asked him about his day and he asked about mine. I gave him a quick recap – leaving out the part about changing into a thousand different outfits before coming to meet him of course – and then, he looks me dead in the eye, and says, “Carrie, about what I said on the phone.”

And that's when I knew for sure he's going to say them. Say those three little words. I try to be calm; to be all cool and collected before he opens his mouth and says the phrase that would change everything after the words were spoken aloud.

I failed miserably.

My breathing got shallow. My hands started to sweat. I was freaking out on the inside, and it showed. He paused and stared at me for a moment with a worried expression on his face, like he was debating whether to continue or not. But as far as I was concerned, he'd gone far enough down the road now, there was no turning back. For either of us. Even if he wanted to remain silent, I was going to sit there until he told me why he'd asked me to meet him.

Thank you for reading this free excerpt from THREE LITTLE WORDS by Krista Boehnert. For performance rights and/or a complete copy of the script, please contact us at:

Brooklyn Publishers, LLC

P.O. Box 248 • Cedar Rapids, Iowa 52406

Toll Free: 1-888-473-8521 • Fax (319) 368-8011

www.brookpub.com

Do Not Copy